

student learning theory

	GET THERE-- PREPARE	BE THERE-- FOCUS	ENGAGE	REMEMBER	USE
What needs to happen for a student to LEARN	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Need to be aware of personal motivations. ▪ Need to cultivate the desire to learn. ▪ Need to manage time in order to attend class and schedule time to study. ▪ Need to manage tasks so they can be completed in a timely manner. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Need to choose to focus in learning situations. ▪ Need to be able to be attentive to learning tasks in the midst of other life situations and stressors. ▪ Need to foster attention by ongoing care for physical, emotional, relational and spiritual needs. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Need to identify purpose for learned material to choose effective study strategies. ▪ Need to interact with material actively. ▪ Need to find relationships between pieces of learned information. ▪ Need to reflect on study methods used and their effectiveness in promoting learning. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Need to reorganize, re-label, and review material repeatedly over time until it can be recalled at the level of understanding required. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ Need to manipulate learned material to suit a variety of purposes—both practiced and unknown. ▪ Need to look for connections between newly learned material and previously known material. ▪ Need to reflect on efforts to use learned material and seek evaluative feedback from others.